

IN HOUSTON, WE HELP OUR NEIGHBORS

Lives You've Changed

John, Julia and their two young children left their apartment just hours before Hurricane Ike destroyed it. They packed everything they could into their small car, but the family was forced to leave behind food, baby supplies and most of their possessions.

Days after the hurricane, with little money and only what they had in their car, John and Julia visited a United Way food and nutrition assistance program. The family was able to immediately get food and infant formula to replace what they lost in the storm. John and Julia were also connected with other services, like medical care, to help them get back on their feet.

United Way of Greater Houston is working in our community every day to ensure that everyone is given a second chance to rebuild their lives.
